

Stormo.io

About Page Copy

We've been in the trenches.

The Stormo founding team has spent two decades building online projects, launching side hustles, and navigating the world of ecommerce. We know what it feels like to pour everything into building a store and then wonder what happens next.

The numbers don't lie.

Roughly 90% of online stores fail within the first 120 days. Many of them are technically open, products listed, store live, but generating zero revenue. The two main reasons are poor online marketing performance and an overall lack of search engine visibility. Most store owners respond the only way they know how. They run paid ads, spend money they don't have, and when the results don't come, they walk away.

The problem was never the store. It was the absence of a plan.

We built Stormo because hardworking people deserve better.

Not shortcuts. Not overnight success promises. Just a realistic, smart, and consistent approach to building a business the right way, from the ground up.

Stormo was built for the store owner who is doing everything right but still waiting for results. For the side hustler who built something real and just needs a clear path forward. For anyone who believes consistency beats shortcuts every time.

Stormo is an AI marketing manager that walks store owners from Point A to Point B to Point C, one focused action at a time. Every day you get a clear, specific step based on your store, your customer, and where you are right now. No guesswork. No expensive ads to start. Just a methodical business plan that limits your risk, controls your expenses, and builds something that lasts.

We're not here to sell you a dream.

We're here to help you build one, consistently, strategically, and on your own terms.

We've been where you are. That's exactly why we built this.

Welcome to Stormo. Let's get you more customers.